FROM FATHER JOHN BOHN

One of the reasons many people do not utilize the Sacrament of Reconciliation today is that they severely underestimate the effect that unreconciled sin has on their souls. We live in a world today where the 'rightness' or 'wrongness' of something is largely determined by the 'consequences' of any given action. For many people, if something has a 'good' consequence, that action is usually seen as 'acceptable,' or, at a minimum, 'not really sinful.' However, if something has a 'bad' consequence, that action is normally seen as 'wrong' and most likely 'sinful.'

As Catholics, we are not 'Consequentialists.' The rightness or wrongness of a particular action is not solely determined by the consequences of the action. In reality, many 'sinful' actions can appear to have good (or at least neutral) consequences, whereas some very 'virtuous' actions may lead to serious negative consequences.

Make no mistake, however. Sin always has consequences. If the sin is serious enough, it can break our relationship with God. (These are called 'Mortal' sins.) Some sins are less serious, and they only wound our relationship with God. (These are called 'Venial" sins.) Additionally, all sin results in 'temporal' (earthly) punishments. These punishments involve various forms of physical, mental, emotional, and spiritual suffering that we endure during this life. We see the first instance of 'temporal' punishments with Adam & Eve when they first sinned in the Garden of Eden. For Eve, the pain of childbirth was the consequence of her sin. For Adam, it was sweating and laboring to grow his own food. And for both of them, the ultimate consequence was physical death. God reminded both of them that they were dirt, and to dirt they would return. (GEN 3:19).

I wrote last week that there is no such thing as a 'private' sin. There is also no such thing as a sin without a negative effect. The sooner we all accept the fact that sin harms us and harms those around us, the sooner we will come to appreciate the truly liberating effect of the Sacrament of Reconciliation.
